

Junior Club, Final Round

The tension was high as we entered into the final round of Junior Club on Saturday. Three drivers; Emily Linscott, Charlie Hand and Alex Jay could all still mathematically win the Monza Championship, while Declan Morris, George Oxford and Harvey Roffe could still top the Silverstone championship.

Harvey Roffe starred in the Silverstone class achieving two heat wins and two second place finishes, however this was only enough to confirm his third place finish in the championship. This was due to an excellent drive from George Oxford, who also had two heat wins, finishing second on the day and Declan Morris who despite finishing third on the day, managed to achieve enough points for him to top the overall championship. Declan has driven consistently all year and his championship win reflects a good seasons racing.

The Monza class was won by Tom Ovenden, who in only his second race performed fantastically, taking two heat wins and a second place. He was followed by Emily Linscott who finished second and Charlie Hand who came third. Emily's second place finish gave her enough points to put her at the top of the Championship, a well earned title for an excellent young driver. Hand was just four points behind her in second place and Alex Jay's seasons efforts were rewarded with a well earned third place.

It has been a entertaining and competitive summer championship with plenty of twists and turns. Congratulations to all the drivers who took part.
